

Wireless internet service providers need the use of the 3.6Ghz band to provide superior service to their customers. The use of this band would allow WISPs to transmit their service over a larger area thereby reducing the costs normally associated with the service.